Did I make a gain of you by any of them I sent. 2 Cor.
 If Auletes, who was a negligent prince, made so much,
 what mult now the Romans make, who govern it so wisely.
Arbutnot on Coins.
 If it is meant of the value of the purchase, it was very high; it being hardly possible to make so much of lands, unless it was reckoned at a very low price.
 18. To reach; to tend to; to arrive at.
 Acolta recordeth, they that fall in the middle can make no land of either side.
Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. vi.
 I've made the port already,
 And laugh securely at the lazy storm.
Dryden.
 They ply their thatter'd oars
 To nearest land, and make the Libyan shoars.
Dryden.
 Did I but purpose to embark with thee,
 While gentle zephyrus plys in profitless sails,
 But would I had not seen thee,
 When the wind was so high,
 To gain.

 31. To MAKE away.

He will not let slip any advantage to make away him whole just title, enclibed by courage and goodness, may one day shake the seat of a never-secure tyranny. Sidney, b. ii.
 The duke of Clarence, lieutenant of Ireland, was, by practices of evil persons about the king his brother, called thence away, and soon after, by sinister means, was clean made away.
 He may have a likely guess,
 How these were they that made away his brother. Shakspeare.
 Trajan would say of the vain jealousy of princes that seek to make away those that aspire to their succession, that there was never king that did put to death his successor. Bacon.
 My mother I flew at my very birth, and since have made away two of her brothers, and happily to make way for the purposes of others against myself. Hayward.

 43. To MAKE of. To produce from; to effect.
 I am astonish'd, that those who have appeared against this paper have made so very little of it.
 44. To MAKE of. To consider; to account; to esteem.
 Makes thee no more of me than of a slave? Dryden.
 45. To MAKE of. To cherish; to foster.
 Xarcus was wonderfully beloved, and made of, by the Turkish merchants, whose language he had learned. Kneller.
 46. To MAKE over. To settle in the hands of trustees.
 Widows, who have tried one lover,
 Trust none again till th' have made over. Hudibras, p. iii.

Whatsoever makes nothing to your subject, and is improper to it, admit not unto your work.
 Blinded he is by the love of himself to believe that the right is wrong, and wrong is right, when it makes for his own advantage.
 2. To operate; to act as a proof or argument, or cause.

Give poets leave to make themselves away. Reformers.
 What multitude of infants have been made away by those who brought them into the world.
 32. To MAKE away. To transfer.
 Debtors, when they are
 When they never mean to pay,
 To some friend make all away.
 33. To MAKE account. To reckon; to believe.
 They made no account but that the navy should be absolutely master of the seas.
 34. To MAKE account of. To esteem; to regard.
 35. To MAKE free with. To treat without ceremony.
 The same who have made free with the greatest names in church and state, and exposed to the world the private mil-fortunes of families.

The wife betimes make over their estates.
 Make o'er thy honour by a deed of trust,
 And give me seizure of the mighty wealth. Dryden.
 47. To MAKE over. To transfer.
 The second mercy made over to us by the second covenant,
 is the promise of pardon.
 Age and youth cannot be made over: nothing but time can take away years, or give them.
 My waist is reduced to the depth of four inches by what I have already made over to my neck. Addison's Guard.
 Moor, to whom that patent was made over, was forced to leave off coining.
 48. To MAKE out. To clear; to explain; to clear to one's self.
 Make out the rest, — I am disorder'd so,
 I know not farther what to say or do. Dryd. Indian Emp.

 Thus think the crowd, who, eager to engage,
 Take quickly fire, and kindle into rage;
 Who ne'er consider, but without a pause
 Make up in passion what they want in cause. Dryden.
 If they retrench any the smaller particulars in their ordinary expence, it will easily make up the halfpenny a-day which we have now under consideration. Addison's Spect.
 This wisely she makes up her time,
 Mis-spent when youth was in its prime. Granville.
 There must needs be another state to make up the inequalities of this, and to false all irregular appearances. Atterbury.
 If his romantick disposition transport him so far as to ex-
